

Louisville Evening Express.

OLD SERIES--VOL. XXV.

LOUISVILLE, SATURDAY EVENING, OCTOBER 9, 1869.

NEW SERIES--VOL. I, NO. 156.

THE CITY.

ADVERTISERS.

Already hundreds of strangers have arrived who desire to attend the convention next week, and there will be thousands to follow. Our merchants and traders should avail themselves of such a chance to advertise in the newspapers. Advertising is the life of trade.

Acknowledgments.

We are obliged to Mr. J. Bamberg, of Bamberg, Bloom & Co., for a file of New York papers in advance of the mail.

Skating Rink.

This is the grand popular night for the rink, and the house will be crowded with all who can get in. It rains, let it rain—that will not spoil the skating nor interfere with anybody's engagement.

Committee of Arrangements.

His Honor Mayor Duncan calls the committee of arrangements to meet this evening at the Council Chamber, at eight o'clock, on business of great importance.

Coroner Moore.

Mr. Moore remains in about the same condition as reported yesterday, very little, if any change being noticed. It is sincerely hoped he may take a turn for the better.

Kentucky Stock.

L. L. Dorsey, of Jefferson county, took several premiums at the St. Louis fair on Thursday and Friday. L. C. Bailey, of Woodford county, also secured two Dorsey takes so many premiums at fairs that we despair of making a note of them all.

Stealing a Horse.

About noon Officer Burk arrested Ed. Craig, or somebody calling himself by that name, for stealing a horse from John Hild, and lodged him in jail. He will on Monday morning, come before his Honor Judge Ed. S. Craig to answer for stealing the horse, and perhaps also for stealing a name.

Re-Elected.

The Board of Directors in the Louisville, Cincinnati and Lexington Railroad Company assembled in the office of the company last night, and proceeded to elect a President for the ensuing year. W. A. Dudley, Esq., of Lexington, who has been President of that branch of the road since its inception, was unanimously elected.

Ex-President Fillmore.

This distinguished gentleman, who is to act as President of the Commercial Convention, will arrive this afternoon, accompanied by Mrs. Fillmore. They will be the guests of Col. Blanton Duncan, and will be called upon this evening by the committee of reception, who will also make arrangements for a public reception.

LUBRICATING OIL.

Good News for Oil Manufacturers. Alex S. Macrae, of Liverpool, England, oil broker, announces under date of 25th September last, that Maryland and Virginia lubricating oil 28 deg. specific gravity, that used to be unsalable in England at fifteen pounds sterling per ton, is now in excessive demand, and the market was cleared at thirty pounds sterling. This figure, taking gold at 137, would be, he writes, equal to $12 per 2.29 pounds.

Louisville Opera House.

Not a vacant seat in the house last night, scarcely standing room anywhere, and one of the most perfectly delighted audiences ever within those walls. The Peace Jubilee introduced into the great orchestra, Field of the Cloth of Gold, called forth shout after shout and peal after peal, till it seemed almost as if the roof would be lifted off. To-night the great jubilee will be repeated, with the Peace Jubilee and all the other attractions.

The Chapman Sisters.

Miss Blanche had a very good house last night, at her benefit, and the "Forty Thieves" was put on the stage in capital style. Miss Blanche, as Gaiety, and Miss Ella, as Morgiana, won all hearts by their imitable personations, while Bishop's appearance as Hassanar brought down the house again and again. For to-night an excellent bill is presented, including "Ision, or the Man at the Wheel," and the farce of the "Happiest Day of my Life."

The Henderson and Nashville Railroad.

At a meeting held the other day J. T. Boyle, of Louisville; John A. Reitz and Peter Semonin, of Evansville; John H. Barrett, of J. Marshall and P. B. Matthews, of Henderson; William Bradley, of Hopkins county; Thomas Green, of Christian county and E. G. Sebrer, of Todd county, were elected directors.

After the election the meeting of stockholders adjourned to meet in Henderson on Thursday, after the first Monday in October, 1870.

From the verbal report of the President of the road it appears that there are already sixty-three miles of the road completed and the cars upon the track—twenty-five miles of the southern end of the road, and thirty-eight miles on the northern end, terminating at Henderson, leaving a gap of thirty-five miles yet to be finished to complete the road through to Nashville. The losses of the road express their intention to have the gap closed up and cars running through to Nashville in less than ten months, although the terms of the lease allow them two years. There are but four miles to be completed to reach the coal fields, which will be done in 90 days.

COMMERCIAL CONVENTION.

Action and Meeting of Committees.
The general committee of arrangements for the Convention next week had a full and important meeting last night at the Council Chamber. The following well-known citizens were added to the committee: John G. Baxter, R. B. Sheridan, Dr. W. E. Gilpin, Dr. J. E. Crowe, H. W. Gray, T. L. McDermott, H. F. Vissman, G. E. Heinsohn, George Brobst, John McAteer, J. E. Sacksteder and M. W. Larue. All these gentlemen are requested to meet the general committee at the Council Chamber this evening, at 8 o'clock. As all the hotels are full, the citizens en masse were requested to throw open their doors to accommodate such of the delegates and guests as cannot find rooms elsewhere. Notice left with the Mayor will be promptly attended to.

A resolution was unanimously adopted in the meeting last night, that the committee of arrangements, in a body, shall wait upon ex-President Fillmore at his public reception Monday, and introduce him to the citizens.

A resolution, appropriating funds to the equipment of the fire department and decorating the engines for the procession, was adopted by the committee.

The procession programme will be published in due time. It takes place on Thursday morning.

Mr. Julius Dorn, chairman of concert committee, reported the consummation of the full programme, and asked that the same appropriation be audited, which was approved.

The banquet committee and invitation committee are called to meet in the Council Chamber this afternoon at 4 o'clock, and the general committee of arrangements will meet again to-night at eight o'clock, at the same place, and a full attendance is requested.

Charles M. Thurston, Esq., has charge of all the clerical department of the convention, and the clerks engaged will work under his supervision.

Mr. Thurston's eminent qualifications as an executive officer, insures the best organization that could be effected.

The Convention.

Governor Palmer, of Illinois, has appointed delegates, who are all expected to be present, and the Governor himself desires coming. The delegates are as follows:

Ex-Governor Richard Oglesby, now in Louisville; J. W. Bowen, Chicago; J. V. Farwell, Chicago; Thomas J. Henderson, Princeton; N. M. Broadwell, Mayor of Springfield; John Williams, Springfield; John Tugessell, Canton; Hon. Anthony Thornton, Shelbyville; Thomas Reese, Centralia; George J. Herriard, Mayor of Quincy; W. F. Miller, Alton; John J. Mitchell, Alton, and John H. Grover, Cairo.

The citizens of Jeffersonville held a rousing meeting last night, at which Mayor Sparks presided, and a delegate was appointed to represent each manufacturing and industrial interest in the city, as follows:

J. D. Rickerts, J. M. and I. R. R.; Jos. W. Sprague, Ohio Falls Car Works; J. L. Bradley, Jeffersonville Mills; D. S. Barmer, Barmer's ship yard; James Howard, Howard & Co.'s ship yard; M. Stratton, general carpenter interest; Wm. A. Ingraham, tanning interest; John S. Hall, Hall, Moore & Burkhardt; Capt. Hall, Hall, Moore & Co.; W. A. Plamader, blacksmithing and wagon-making interest; George Johnson, pottery interest; John S. Adams, Citizens National Bank; H. H. Reynolds, Ferry Company; Marcus Brookbanks, coopers interest; J. W. Hopkins, tobacco interest; Colonel W. W. Caldwell, insurance interest; George Johnson, pottery interest; W. Kane, carriage manufacturer; Henry Lang, brewery interest; Wm. E. Lister, sheet iron; Peter Myers, Blythe, Myers & Co., planing; Gen. R. B. Potter, Jr., United States mill; James Berk, brick-making interest; William S. Jacobs, transferers.

James Keigwin, Daniel Howard, Captain A. J. Howard, Captain John Kane and Colonel James Leiper were appointed a committee of arrangements.

The Mayor was authorized to appoint delegates for every interest omitted.

Real Ghost Down Town.

The denizens of the West End are trying to initiate the people of New Albany, and have got up a real ghost, which haunts a two-story brick. The reports have been the talk of the people for several years past, but very lately it would seem that a committee of a dozen full-grown men went to the house to watch for the ghost. True to time, just at midnight the ghost, or ghostly rather, made her appearance in the room, getting into a horse-carriage which had come down the chimney, or by some other difficult mode of entrance, and not through the door; and no sooner was her ladyship seated within her satisfaction, than the invisible driver touched up his invisible steeds, and the visible chariot, with its precious freight, suddenly disappeared through the key-hole, or some other equally impossible and marvelous mode of exit; thereupon the twelve brave men fled from the premises, fully persuaded their latter end was near at hand.

Enterprise.

A new paper, called the Owen County News, has been started at New Liberty, Ky. We see that twenty or thirty Cincinnati merchants advertise in it, and but one from Louisville—the Ninth-street Warehouse, inserted by R. W. Ronald, Esq., who has been traveling in that region; yet that trade justly belongs to Louisville. Our merchants here stand in their own light. However, as our merchants patronize their own newspapers to such a limited extent in the way of advertising, we reckon it is useless to speak in behalf of our confreres of the Owen paper.

An Outrageous Fellow.

Yesterday a man named Davis Scherl had suit brought against him before Justice White for a balance of $2 30 due on a table, and judgment went against him. He went directly to his residence, on Market street, between Tenth and Eleventh, and began cutting up high—broke the table and aforesaid into fifty pieces, pitched into his wife, making such threats that she got out a peace warrant. The magistrate went to see if he could not quiet him down, but found him like one possessed of the devil. Such vile, nasty, obscene language as fell from his lips, aimed at his wife, in the presence of some other ladies present, never before came from human tongue. He was taken to the office, and the trial progressed. In the evidence it appeared that he and Mrs. Bettie Scherl were married in New York some five or six years ago, where they continued to live till some six weeks since, when he came to Louisville, and sent for his wife, who has been here only two weeks. He was anxious to go back to New York, and had determined to take the furniture with him; to prevent which the landlord took out a distress warrant. To add to his troubles, his wife had received $65, which his brother-in-law had paid, and in view of his threat to leave, would not let him leave; hence his threats against her. She gave, as his reason for bringing her from New York, and then determining on going back himself, that he had some lover there. Yes; he said he had ten or twelve, and that she could have as many here as she pleased. The court held him to bail in $100 for three months. He said he couldn't give it. When told he would have to go to jail for three months, he replied that he didn't care a— if he went for six months, and so he went in charge of an officer. Justice White says that in all the course of his life he never saw a more vicious fellow, nor heard such vile language as he used.

Wary of Life.

Some six weeks ago, an old German, who gave his name as Daniel Hugel, stopped at the saloon of Mr. Kurfus, corner of Floyd and Lafayette streets, and has remained about the house till now, doing such light work as Mr. K. was willing to give him in return for his living. He was, to all appearances, a genial-hearted, clever old man, who had seen nearly all of this life usually permitted to one man. Born in Germany, and emigrating to this country at an early age, he married and settled in Cincinnati, where he reared a large family of children, nearly all of whom are now filling their places in life, married and believed to be doing well. Some ten years ago, for reasons not known, he was divorced from his wife, and, at the breaking out of the war, entered the army, went through its horrors, and, at its close, returned to his old home, having served three months in the 5th U. S. V. and the balance of the time in the 11th.

This is about all of his story that is known here. What mental miseries preyed upon him none knows, or is likely to know. He was drinking some last night, but no more than customary, and went to bed in apparently his usual good health. About one o'clock this morning the inmates of the house were called to their room by some unusual noises only to find on arrival that the old man was dead. A physician was sent for immediately, who, on examination, declared that his death resulted from arsenic. He was about fifty-six years old. Mr. Kurfus will notify the children in Cincinnati, and deposit the body in a vault, subject to their order.

BECKINRIDGE.

Owen County Welcomes Him.
John C. Beckinridge was at the Owen County fair yesterday. He had arrived the previous night at New Liberty, and the intelligence was spread throughout the county that he would be at the fair the next day. Hundreds of men, women and children flocked thither at once, not to see the fair but the gallant Beckinridge. They gave him a hearty and glorious welcome. They had not seen him for years, and men and women gathered around him and told him how glad they were to meet him once more. He responded briefly, and told them he was proud to receive their greetings. Whatever of prominence in life he had enjoyed, to the people of Owen more than any others, was he indebted, and he now, as ever, bore them in grateful remembrance. The General spoke of personal matters alone, and did not touch on any political topic. His reception was a perfect ovation, and to illustrate the effect of his magical presence, an Owen county Radical—declared if John C. Beckinridge could be a candidate for President, he would vote for him before any man living! There is redemption for that Radical yet.

LOUISVILLE CITY COURT.

HON. E. S. CRAIG, JUDGE.
SATURDAY, October 9.
Louis Switzer, cutting Louis Herold with intent to kill; continued.
Frank Lawler, H. Smith and P. Massey, assault and battery on and wounding William Jassett and H. Campbell with intent to kill; continued.
W. H. Turney alias O. B. Scott, stealing a quantity of cutlery from Koehnerhart & Co.; held in $200 to answer.
W. K. Turney alias O. B. Scott, stealing six knives, six forks and eleven spoons from F. Farset; held in $200 bonds to answer.
Alford Karch, stealing a shawl worth over $100 from Rufus Goose; continued.
Mary Barr, maliciously cutting David Bergin, with intent to kill; continued for two days.
James Tompkins, disorderly conduct; dismissed.

A Weather Prediction.

Captain Saxby, of the Royal Navy, predicts horrible weather in October. At present writing we are inclined to credit the Captain's prediction. He writes:

At 7 A. M., on the ensuing October 5, the moon will be the part of her orbit which is nearest the earth; her attraction will, therefore, be at its maximum force. At noon the moon will be on the earth's equator, a circumstance which never occurs without marked atmospheric disturbance; at 2 P. M., the same day, lines drawn from the zenith center with the sun and moon in the same arc of right ascension. The moon's attraction and the sun's will, therefore, be acting in the same direction. In other words, the new moon will be on the earth's equator when in perigee, and nothing more threatening can occur of high tides and destructive storms.

The Rain.

This the third cold, rainy and disagreeable Saturday which we have had in succession, each presenting almost the identical features of the other two. If this one pattern entirely after the other two, the rain will cease this evening and to-morrow will be clear but cold.

Louisville in the Convention.

The following is a correct and official list of the delegates appointed by the Mayor and General Council, to represent the city in the Commercial Convention:
Ex-Gov. T. E. Bramlette, R. P. Morton, R. C. Levy, John Dorn, J. B. Bloom, H. Verboort, Jr., J. S. Litzgow, R. A. Robinson, Gen. G. W. Thibault, P. A. Bannan, Jas. Bridgerford, John B. Davies.
To the above list the General Council added the names of Messrs. Mayor, W. H. Hance.

HELLISH DEED.

A Negro Flood Violates and Nearly Drowns a Lady Sixty-Five Years of Age, and is Slain by the Indignant People.
Correspondence of the Philadelphia Age.

SHREWSBURY, YORK COUNTY, PA., October 1, 1869.

On Wednesday, the 29th ult., Miss Reip, a most estimable lady, sixty-five years old, from the city of Baltimore, visiting her friends some eight miles southeast of this place, was attacked by a burly young negro, Jim Quinn, who, after knocking her down, dragged her some distance into a wood, and there, by the aid of a knife, somewhat recovered from the blow, wrought to a frenzy, resisted until overpowered by the superior strength of her assailant. In the struggle her clothing was nearly all torn from her person, which the hellish fiend twisted into ropes, and binding her hands and feet to different trees, treated her to a most cruel and purposeful assault. He left her, almost lifeless and weltering in blood, with a view, no doubt, of seeking his victim again at night, returned to his work in an adjoining cornfield. After some four hours of terrible agony, Miss Reip succeeded in releasing herself, and crawled to the edge of the wood, where she lay for some time, until she was discovered by the negro still at work arrested him; he denied his guilt, but upon examination his under garments were found saturated with the blood of his victim. He was confined in a corn-crib until Mr. K. could procure medical aid for the lady, and was then returned to his custody to place him in a cage, and the villain had escaped. After several days of fruitless search, he was to-day arrested near this place, and upon being confronted by persons who knew him, confessed his guilt. He was placed in the custody of Officer Roser, of Baltimore county, Maryland, who started to take him to the jail of that county, and on the way, the villain, who was still at work arrested him; he denied his guilt, but upon examination his under garments were found saturated with the blood of his victim. He was confined in a corn-crib until Mr. K. could procure medical aid for the lady, and was then returned to his custody to place him in a cage, and the villain had escaped. After several days of fruitless search, he was to-day arrested near this place, and upon being confronted by persons who knew him, confessed his guilt. He was placed in the custody of Officer Roser, of Baltimore county, Maryland, who started to take him to the jail of that county, and on the way, the villain, who was still at work arrested him; he denied his guilt, but upon examination his under garments were found saturated with the blood of his victim. He was confined in a corn-crib until Mr. K. could procure medical aid for the lady, and was then returned to his custody to place him in a cage, and the villain had escaped. After several days of fruitless search, he was to-day arrested near this place, and upon being confronted by persons who knew him, confessed his guilt. He was placed in the custody of Officer Roser, of Baltimore county, Maryland, who started to take him to the jail of that county, and on the way, the villain, who was still at work arrested him; he denied his guilt, but upon examination his under garments were found saturated with the blood of his victim. He was confined in a corn-crib until Mr. K. could procure medical aid for the lady, and was then returned to his custody to place him in a cage, and the villain had escaped. After several days of fruitless search, he was to-day arrested near this place, and upon being confronted by persons who knew him, confessed his guilt. He was placed in the custody of Officer Roser, of Baltimore county, Maryland, who started to take him to the jail of that county, and on the way, the villain, who was still at work arrested him; he denied his guilt, but upon examination his under garments were found saturated with the blood of his victim. He was confined in a corn-crib until Mr. K. could procure medical aid for the lady, and was then returned to his custody to place him in a cage, and the villain had escaped. After several days of fruitless search, he was to-day arrested near this place, and upon being confronted by persons who knew him, confessed his guilt. He was placed in the custody of Officer Roser, of Baltimore county, Maryland, who started to take him to the jail of that county, and on the way, the villain, who was still at work arrested him; he denied his guilt, but upon examination his under garments were found saturated with the blood of his victim. He was confined in a corn-crib until Mr. K. could procure medical aid for the lady, and was then returned to his custody to place him in a cage, and the villain had escaped. After several days of fruitless search, he was to-day arrested near this place, and upon being confronted by persons who knew him, confessed his guilt. He was placed in the custody of Officer Roser, of Baltimore county, Maryland, who started to take him to the jail of that county, and on the way, the villain, who was still at work arrested him; he denied his guilt, but upon examination his under garments were found saturated with the blood of his victim. He was confined in a corn-crib until Mr. K. could procure medical aid for the lady, and was then returned to his custody to place him in a cage, and the villain had escaped. After several days of fruitless search, he was to-day arrested near this place, and upon being confronted by persons who knew him, confessed his guilt. He was placed in the custody of Officer Roser, of Baltimore county, Maryland, who started to take him to the jail of that county, and on the way, the villain, who was still at work arrested him; he denied his guilt, but upon examination his under garments were found saturated with the blood of his victim. He was confined in a corn-crib until Mr. K. could procure medical aid for the lady, and was then returned to his custody to place him in a cage, and the villain had escaped. After several days of fruitless search, he was to-day arrested near this place, and upon being confronted by persons who knew him, confessed his guilt. He was placed in the custody of Officer Roser, of Baltimore county, Maryland, who started to take him to the jail of that county, and on the way, the villain, who was still at work arrested him; he denied his guilt, but upon examination his under garments were found saturated with the blood of his victim. He was confined in a corn-crib until Mr. K. could procure medical aid for the lady, and was then returned to his custody to place him in a cage, and the villain had escaped. After several days of fruitless search, he was to-day arrested near this place, and upon being confronted by persons who knew him, confessed his guilt. He was placed in the custody of Officer Roser, of Baltimore county, Maryland, who started to take him to the jail of that county, and on the way, the villain, who was still at work arrested him; he denied his guilt, but upon examination his under garments were found saturated with the blood of his victim. He was confined in a corn-crib until Mr. K. could procure medical aid for the lady, and was then returned to his custody to place him in a cage, and the villain had escaped. After several days of fruitless search, he was to-day arrested near this place, and upon being confronted by persons who knew him, confessed his guilt. He was placed in the custody of Officer Roser, of Baltimore county, Maryland, who started to take him to the jail of that county, and on the way, the villain, who was still at work arrested him; he denied his guilt, but upon examination his under garments were found saturated with the blood of his victim. He was confined in a corn-crib until Mr. K. could procure medical aid for the lady, and was then returned to his custody to place him in a cage, and the villain had escaped. After several days of fruitless search, he was to-day arrested near this place, and upon being confronted by persons who knew him, confessed his guilt. He was placed in the custody of Officer Roser, of Baltimore county, Maryland, who started to take him to the jail of that county, and on the way, the villain, who was still at work arrested him; he denied his guilt, but upon examination his under garments were found saturated with the blood of his victim. He was confined in a corn-crib until Mr. K. could procure medical aid for the lady, and was then returned to his custody to place him in a cage, and the villain had escaped. After several days of fruitless search, he was to-day arrested near this place, and upon being confronted by persons who knew him, confessed his guilt. He was placed in the custody of Officer Roser, of Baltimore county, Maryland, who started to take him to the jail of that county, and on the way, the villain, who was still at work arrested him; he denied his guilt, but upon examination his under garments were found saturated with the blood of his victim. He was confined in a corn-crib until Mr. K. could procure medical aid for the lady, and was then returned to his custody to place him in a cage, and the villain had escaped. After several days of fruitless search, he was to-day arrested near this place, and upon being confronted by persons who knew him, confessed his guilt. He was placed in the custody of Officer Roser, of Baltimore county, Maryland, who started to take him to the jail of that county, and on the way, the villain, who was still at work arrested him; he denied his guilt, but upon examination his under garments were found saturated with the blood of his victim. He was confined in a corn-crib until Mr. K. could procure medical aid for the lady, and was then returned to his custody to place him in a cage, and the villain had escaped. After several days of fruitless search, he was to-day arrested near this place, and upon being confronted by persons who knew him, confessed his guilt. He was placed in the custody of Officer Roser, of Baltimore county, Maryland, who started to take him to the jail of that county, and on the way, the villain, who was still at work arrested him; he denied his guilt, but upon examination his under garments were found saturated with the blood of his victim. He was confined in a corn-crib until Mr. K. could procure medical aid for the lady, and was then returned to his custody to place him in a cage, and the villain had escaped. After several days of fruitless search, he was to-day arrested near this place, and upon being confronted by persons who knew him, confessed his guilt. He was placed in the custody of Officer Roser, of Baltimore county, Maryland, who started to take him to the jail of that county, and on the way, the villain, who was still at work arrested him; he denied his guilt, but upon examination his under garments were found saturated with the blood of his victim. He was confined in a corn-crib until Mr. K. could procure medical aid for the lady, and was then returned to his custody to place him in a cage, and the villain had escaped. After several days of fruitless search, he was to-day arrested near this place, and upon being confronted by persons who knew him, confessed his guilt. He was placed in the custody of Officer Roser, of Baltimore county, Maryland, who started to take him to the jail of that county, and on the way, the villain, who was still at work arrested him; he denied his guilt, but upon examination his under garments were found saturated with the blood of his victim. He was confined in a corn-crib until Mr. K. could procure medical aid for the lady, and was then returned to his custody to place him in a cage, and the villain had escaped. After several days of fruitless search, he was to-day arrested near this place, and upon being confronted by persons who knew him, confessed his guilt. He was placed in the custody of Officer Roser, of Baltimore county, Maryland, who started to take him to the jail of that county, and on the way, the villain, who was still at work arrested him; he denied his guilt, but upon examination his under garments were found saturated with the blood of his victim. He was confined in a corn-crib until Mr. K. could procure medical aid for the lady, and was then returned to his custody to place him in a cage, and the villain had escaped. After several days of fruitless search, he was to-day arrested near this place, and upon being confronted by persons who knew him, confessed his guilt. He was placed in the custody of Officer Roser, of Baltimore county, Maryland, who started to take him to the jail of that county, and on the way, the villain, who was still at work arrested him; he denied his guilt, but upon examination his under garments were found saturated with the blood of his victim. He was confined in a corn-crib until Mr. K. could procure medical aid for the lady, and was then returned to his custody to place him in a cage, and the villain had escaped. After several days of fruitless search, he was to-day arrested near this place, and upon being confronted by persons who knew him, confessed his guilt. He was placed in the custody of Officer Roser, of Baltimore county, Maryland, who started to take him to the jail of that county, and on the way, the villain, who was still at work arrested him; he denied his guilt, but upon examination his under garments were found saturated with the blood of his victim. He was confined in a corn-crib until Mr. K. could procure medical aid for the lady, and was then returned to his custody to place him in a cage, and the villain had escaped. After several days of fruitless search, he was to-day arrested near this place, and upon being confronted by persons who knew him, confessed his guilt. He was placed in the custody of Officer Roser, of Baltimore county, Maryland, who started to take him to the jail of that county, and on the way, the villain, who was still at work arrested him; he denied his guilt, but upon examination his under garments were found saturated with the blood of his victim. He was confined in a corn-crib until Mr. K. could procure medical aid for the lady, and was then returned to his custody to place him in a cage, and the villain had escaped. After several days of fruitless search, he was to-day arrested near this place, and upon being confronted by persons who knew him, confessed his guilt. He was placed in the custody of Officer Roser, of Baltimore county, Maryland, who started to take him to the jail of that county, and on the way, the villain, who was still at work arrested him; he denied his guilt, but upon examination his under garments were found saturated with the blood of his victim. He was confined in a corn-crib until Mr. K. could procure medical aid for the lady, and was then returned to his custody to place him in a cage, and the villain had escaped. After several days of fruitless search, he was to-day arrested near this place, and upon being confronted by persons who knew him, confessed his guilt. He was placed in the custody of Officer Roser, of Baltimore county, Maryland, who started to take him to the jail of that county, and on the way, the villain, who was still at work arrested him; he denied his guilt, but upon examination his under garments were found saturated with the blood of his victim. He was confined in a corn-crib until Mr. K. could procure medical aid for the lady, and was then returned to his custody to place him in a cage, and the villain had escaped. After several days of fruitless search, he was to-day arrested near this place, and upon being confronted by persons who knew him, confessed his guilt. He was placed in the custody of Officer Roser, of Baltimore county, Maryland, who started to take him to the jail of that county, and on the way, the villain, who was still at work arrested him; he denied his guilt, but upon examination his under garments were found saturated with the blood of his victim. He was confined in a corn-crib until Mr. K. could procure medical aid for the lady, and was then returned to his custody to place him in a cage, and the villain had escaped. After several days of fruitless search, he was to-day arrested near this place, and upon being confronted by persons who knew him, confessed his guilt. He was placed in the custody of Officer Roser, of Baltimore county, Maryland, who started to take him to the jail of that county, and on the way, the villain, who was still at work arrested him; he denied his guilt, but upon examination his under garments were found saturated with the blood of his victim. He was confined in a corn-crib until Mr. K. could procure medical aid for the lady, and was then returned to his custody to place him in a cage, and the villain had escaped. After several days of fruitless search, he was to-day arrested near this place, and upon being confronted by persons who knew him, confessed his guilt. He was placed in the custody of Officer Roser, of Baltimore county, Maryland, who started to take him to the jail of that county, and on the way, the villain, who was still at work arrested him; he denied his guilt, but upon examination his under garments were found saturated with the blood of his victim. He was confined in a corn-crib until Mr. K. could procure medical aid for the lady, and was then returned to his custody to place him in a cage, and the villain had escaped. After several days of fruitless search, he was to-day arrested near this place, and upon being confronted by persons who knew him, confessed his guilt. He was placed in the custody of Officer Roser, of Baltimore county, Maryland, who started to take him to the jail of that county, and on the way, the villain, who was still at work arrested him; he denied his guilt, but upon examination his under garments were found saturated with the blood of his victim. He was confined in a corn-crib until Mr. K. could procure medical aid for the lady, and was then returned to his custody to place him in a cage, and the villain had escaped. After several days of fruitless search, he was to-day arrested near this place, and upon being confronted by persons who knew him, confessed his guilt. He was placed in the custody of Officer Roser, of Baltimore county, Maryland, who started to take him to the jail of that county, and on the way, the villain, who was still at work arrested him; he denied his guilt, but upon examination his under garments were found saturated with the blood of his victim. He was confined in a corn-crib until Mr. K. could procure medical aid for the lady, and was then returned to his custody to place him in a cage, and the villain had escaped. After several days of fruitless search, he was to-day arrested near this place, and upon being confronted by persons who knew him, confessed his guilt. He was placed in the custody of Officer Roser, of Baltimore county, Maryland, who started to take him to the jail of that county, and on the way, the villain, who was still at work arrested him; he denied his guilt, but upon examination his under garments were found saturated with the blood of his victim. He was confined in a corn-crib until Mr. K. could procure medical aid for the lady, and was then returned to his custody to place him in a cage, and the villain had escaped. After several days of fruitless search, he was to-day arrested near this place, and upon being confronted by persons who knew him, confessed his guilt. He was placed in the custody of Officer Roser, of Baltimore county, Maryland, who started to take him to the jail of that county, and on the way, the villain, who was still at work arrested him; he denied his guilt, but upon examination his under garments were found saturated with the blood of his victim. He was confined in a corn-crib until Mr. K. could procure medical aid for the lady, and was then returned to his custody to place him in a cage, and the villain had escaped. After several days of fruitless search, he was to-day arrested near this place, and upon being confronted by persons who knew him, confessed his guilt. He was placed in the custody of Officer Roser, of Baltimore county, Maryland, who started to take him to the jail of that county, and on the way, the villain, who was still at work arrested him; he denied his guilt, but upon examination his under garments were found saturated with the blood of his victim. He was confined in a corn-crib until Mr. K. could procure medical aid for the lady, and was then returned to his custody to place him in a cage, and the villain had escaped. After several days of fruitless search, he was to-day arrested near this place, and upon being confronted by persons who knew him, confessed his guilt. He was placed in the custody of Officer Roser, of Baltimore county, Maryland, who started to take him to the jail of that county, and on the way, the villain, who was still at work arrested him; he denied his guilt, but upon examination his under garments were found saturated with the blood of his victim. He was confined in a corn-crib until Mr. K. could procure medical aid for the lady, and was then returned to his custody to place him in a cage, and the villain had escaped. After several days of fruitless search, he was to-day arrested near this place, and upon being confronted by persons who knew him, confessed his guilt. He was placed in the custody of Officer Roser, of Baltimore county, Maryland, who started to take him to the jail of that county, and on the way, the villain, who was still at work arrested him; he denied his guilt, but upon examination his under garments were found saturated with the blood of his victim. He was confined in a corn-crib until Mr. K. could procure medical aid for the lady, and was then returned to his custody to place him in a cage, and the villain had escaped. After several days of fruitless search, he was to-day arrested near this place, and upon being confronted by persons who knew him, confessed his guilt. He was placed in the custody of Officer Roser, of Baltimore county, Maryland, who started to take him to the jail of that county, and on the way, the villain, who was still at work arrested him; he denied his guilt, but upon examination his under garments were found saturated with the blood of his victim. He was confined in a corn-crib until Mr. K. could procure medical aid for the lady, and was then returned to his custody to place him in a cage, and the villain had escaped. After several days of fruitless search, he was to-day arrested near this place, and upon being confronted by persons who knew him, confessed his guilt. He was placed in the custody of Officer Roser, of Baltimore county, Maryland, who started to take him to the jail of that county, and on the way, the villain, who was still at work arrested him; he denied his guilt, but upon examination his under garments were found saturated with the blood of his victim. He was confined in a corn-crib until Mr. K. could procure medical aid for the lady, and was then returned to his custody to place him in a cage, and the villain had escaped. After several days of fruitless search, he was to-day arrested near this place, and upon being confronted by persons who knew him, confessed his guilt. He was placed in the custody of Officer Roser, of Baltimore county, Maryland, who started to take him to the jail of that county, and on the way, the villain, who was still at work arrested him; he denied his guilt, but upon examination his under garments were found saturated with the blood of his victim. He was confined in a corn-crib until Mr. K. could procure medical aid for the lady, and was then returned to his custody to place him in a cage, and the villain had escaped. After several days of fruitless search, he was to-day arrested near this place, and upon being confronted by persons who knew him, confessed his guilt. He was placed in the custody of Officer Roser, of Baltimore county, Maryland, who started to take him to the jail of that county, and on the way, the villain, who was still at work arrested him; he denied his guilt, but upon examination his under garments were found saturated with the blood of his victim. He was confined in a corn-crib until Mr. K. could procure medical aid for the lady, and was then returned to his custody to place him in a cage, and the villain had escaped. After several days of fruitless search, he was to-day arrested near this place, and upon being confronted by persons who knew him, confessed his guilt. He was placed in the custody of Officer Roser, of Baltimore county, Maryland, who started to take him to the jail of that county, and on the way, the villain, who was still at work arrested him; he denied his guilt, but upon examination his under garments were found saturated with the blood of his victim. He was confined in a corn-crib until Mr. K. could procure medical aid for the lady, and was then returned to his custody to place him in a cage, and the villain had escaped. After several days of fruitless search, he was to-day arrested near this place, and upon being confronted by persons who knew him, confessed his guilt. He was placed in the custody of Officer Roser, of Baltimore county, Maryland, who started to take him to the jail of that county, and on the way, the villain, who was still at work arrested him; he denied his guilt, but upon examination his under garments were found saturated with the blood of his victim. He was confined in a corn-crib until Mr. K. could procure medical aid for the lady, and was then returned to his custody to place him in a cage, and the villain had escaped. After several days of fruitless search, he was to-day arrested near this place, and upon being confronted by persons who knew him, confessed his guilt. He was placed in the custody of Officer Roser, of Baltimore county, Maryland, who started to take him to the jail of that county, and on the way, the villain, who was still at work arrested him; he denied his guilt, but upon examination his under garments were found saturated with the blood of his victim. He was confined in a corn-crib until Mr. K. could procure medical aid for the lady, and was then returned to his custody to place him in a cage, and the villain had escaped. After several days of fruitless search, he was to-day arrested near this place, and upon being confronted by persons who knew him, confessed his guilt. He was placed in the custody of Officer Roser, of Baltimore county, Maryland, who started to take him to the jail of that county, and on the way, the villain, who was still at work arrested him; he denied his guilt, but upon examination his under garments were found saturated with the blood of his victim. He was confined in a corn-crib until Mr. K. could procure medical aid for the lady, and was then returned to his custody to place him in a cage, and the villain had escaped. After several days of fruitless search, he was to-day arrested near this place, and upon being confronted by persons who knew him, confessed his guilt. He was placed in the custody of Officer Roser, of Baltimore county, Maryland, who started to take him to the jail of that county, and on the way, the villain, who was still at work arrested him; he denied his guilt,

